A REPORT TO THE HONORABLE TIMOTHY M. KAINE, GOVERNOR,
AND
THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY OF VIRGINIA

ROANOKE RIVER BASIN BI-STATE COMMISSION
2009 ANNUAL REPORT

October 1, 2009

Executive Summary

The Roanoke River Basin Bi-State Commission was established in the executive branch of state government. Duties and powers of the Bi-State Commission are pursuant to Virginia Code § 62.1-69.37.

This inaugural meeting of the Roanoke River Basin Bi-State Commission was held in March 2009 with Commission members from Virginia and North Carolina. One of the topics the Commission focused on is the request from Raleigh, NC outside the Basin for a withdrawal from the Kerr Reservoir (Buggs Island Lake) in the basin. As a result of this request, a Water Allocation Ad Hoc Committee was formed with staff from both Virginia and North Carolina agencies, Virginia Tech, University of North Carolina, and Duke University. The goal of the Ad Hoc Committee is to develop a protocol for such requests that the Commission could approve and submit for consideration of the executive branches of both states and the U. S. Army Corps of Engineers.

This report provides information regarding Roanoke River Basin Bi-State Commission's activities during the 2009 calendar year and identifies issues important to the success of Bi-State Commission and to the Roanoke River Basin.

I. Introduction

The Roanoke River Basin Bi-State Commission was established in the executive branch of state government. Its duties and objectives are pursuant to Va. Code §§ 62.1-69.37 – 62.1-69.44. The Bi-State Commission is composed of 18 members, nine from Virginia and nine from North Carolina. Composition of the membership is as follows: the six Virginia legislative members appointed to the Virginia Roanoke River Basin Advisory Committee and three non-legislative gubernatorial appointments. The North Carolina delegation is appointed in a similar fashion.

The Roanoke River Basin Bi-State Commission was established as a bi-state commission composed of members from the Commonwealth of Virginia and the State of North Carolina. The purpose of the Commission is to:

Provide guidance, conduct joint meetings, and make recommendations to local, state, and federal legislative and administrative bodies, and to others as it deems necessary and appropriate, regarding the use, stewardship, and enhancement of the [Roanoke River] Basin's water and other natural resources;

Provide a forum for discussion of issues affecting the Basin's water quantity, water quality, and other natural resources;

Promote communication, coordination, and education among stakeholders within the Basin;

Identify Basin-related problems and recommend appropriate solutions; and

Undertake studies and prepare, publish, and disseminate information through reports, and other communications, related to water quantity, water quality, and other natural resources of the Basin

The Bi-State Commission met for the first time as in calendar year 2009.

II. Meetings and Locations

The Roanoke River Basin Bi-State Commission meets throughout the Basin in an effort to make the meetings available to all Basin constituents in both states. This year the Commission held meetings in Clarksville, VA; Henderson, NC; and Danville, VA.

III. Organization

At the initial meeting of the Roanoke River Basin Bi-State Commission, Mike McEvoy, Chairman of the Virginia Roanoke River Basin Advisory Committee, and North Carolina Representative Lucy Allen were appointed co-chairs of the Bi-State Commission until the group became more organized by the development and adoption of By-Laws. Staff was directed to develop By-Laws, which were presented to the Bi-State Commission for consideration at the August 2009 meeting. These By-Laws were adopted by the Commission at their August 21, 2009 meeting.

V. Non-legislative Delegates to the Roanoke River Basin Bi-State Commission

Mike McEvoy, John Feild and Haywood Hamlet are the Virginia non-legislative delegates to the Roanoke River Basin Bi-State Commission and were appointed by the Governor.

VI. Committees

The Roanoke River Basin Bi-State Commission has authority to establish standing committees from the following mandated groups: Agriculture and Forestry, Lake Interests, Municipal Interests and Permit Holders, River Interests, and Water. In accordance with the enabling legislation, the Bi-State Commission may also establish other standing and ad hoc committees that the Commission deems necessary and appropriate. Membership and guidelines for staff recommended committees are under development.

The Virginia Roanoke River Basin Advisory Committee has been meeting for about five years. The Committee established similar standing committees to those required by the Bi-State Commission in anticipation of the Commission being constituted. The Advisory Committees' standing committees will be structured to support the Bi-State Commission standing committees. It is expected that Virginia membership to the Bi-State Commission committees will include representatives from the Advisory Committee standing committees.

At the initial meeting of the Roanoke River Basin Bi-State Commission, the Commission determined that an ad hoc committee was needed to address a concern by members that there were potential competitors outside the basin for the available municipal and industrial storage allocation of Kerr Reservoir. The Water Allocation Ad Hoc Committee was formed with representatives from the Virginia Department of Environmental Quality and the North Carolina Department of Natural and Environmental Resources as co-chairs. Representatives from Virginia Tech, Duke University, and University of North Carolina will also serve on the committee, with others added as appropriate.

VII. Issues and Topics of Interest:

Importance of Natural Resources to the Economic Vitality of the Basin: People reside in and come to the Basin area to pursue various interests including vacation, lifestyle, aesthetics, boating, fishing, etc. These activities and personal values help drive the economic engine of the local and regional area. Clean water and ample flow and supply are recognized as essential to existing beneficial uses and future economic growth. The importance of agriculture and forestry to the lifestyle and economy is notable. There are a number of tools available that offer economic incentives and help protect water quality and other resources, conserve open space/"greenfields", limit sprawl, and help preserve our way of life. These include Purchase of Development Rights (PDRs), Transfer of Development Rights (TDRs), forest riparian buffer tax credits, forest legacy perpetual easements, state and federal grants, loans, and cost share programs, Ag/Forestry Districts in some areas, conservation easements, and "Brownfields" redevelopment.

Inter-basin Transfer of Water (IBT): Raleigh, Durham, Cary, and Granville County, North Carolina, have made an inquiry to the United States Army Corps of Engineers (USACE) about the availability of as much as 26,000 acre-feet (AF) of water from Kerr Reservoir. An allocation from Kerr Reservoir was given in 2006 to Henderson, North Carolina and other partners which, according to news reports, resulted in the transfer of water out of the Basin, to localities as far south as Franklin County, North Carolina. This water is distributed through the Kerr Lake Regional Water System which was formed by the cities of Henderson and Oxford and serves Vance, Granville, and Warren Counties. Because a storage allocation already existed to support a 10 mgd withdrawal, Kerr Lake Regional Water System does not need additional approval from the USACE. A North Carolina inter-basin transfer certificate is required to pass 2 mgd or more of water from the Roanoke to the Tar and Neuse River Basins. This certificate has been applied for and initial public comment sought for drafting the Environmental Impact Statement (EIS). North Carolina expects this certificate review to be a multi-year process.

The Water Allocation Ad Hoc Committee, with representatives from both Virginia and North Carolina, is charged with establishing a "protocol" for consideration by the Bi-State Commission that could ultimately serve as a framework agreement for the states and the USACE in considering requests for additional water allocation. The goal is to develop a process that both Virginia and North Carolina can endorse that protects the Roanoke River Basin and assists in the careful planning of this resource. Coordination and consensus building in the entire Basin on watershed management issues is essential to sound watershed decision making and management.

Uranium Mining - Uranium mining in the Commonwealth has been prohibited since 1982 by a state moratorium, although approval for restricted uranium exploration in the state was granted in 2007. The Virginia Coal and Energy Commission has proposed that the Virginia Center for Coal and Energy Research conduct a study on the impact of uranium mining in the Commonwealth. Virginia Uranium, Inc. has indicated an interest in initiating mining and processing operations in Pittsylvania County in the Roanoke River Basin watershed, should the moratorium be lifted.

There have been several presentations to the Roanoke River Basin Bi-State Commission on this topic, and interested citizens have addressed the Commission under public comment at the meetings.

Basin-wide Dialogue: A goal of the Roanoke River Basin Bi-State Commission is to open channels of communication. It is important that dialogue take place which is representative of all areas of the Basin. Speakers representing different geographic areas and interests have addressed the Commission.
