PUBLISHED - Study of transit-related issues in the Commonwealth. In conducting its study, the Department of Rail and Public Transportation (DRPT) shall study, but not be limited to, the following issues: 1. Performance. The study should determine if there should be a system in place to reward operator performance based upon specific performance criteria (e.g., farebox recovery, cost per passenger trip, passenger trips per vehicle revenue hour, etc.); 2. Prioritization - currently all capital requests are matched equally. The study should examine different funding categories; 3. Stability - match ratios change every year based upon demand and available revenues. The study should examine holding systems harmless at existing levels and creating a reserve to stabilize funding for both capital and operating expenses; and 4. Allocation - current funding formulas were established in the Code of Virginia about 25 years ago at a time when transit was not as important as today in the overall transportation network. The study should evaluate the allocation of the 14.7 percent of Transportation Trust Fund revenues among capital and operating expenses and special programs. The study should also address the current Code language that allows transit funding up to 95 percent of eligible capital and operating expenses, and should determine an appropriate percentage. PUBLISHED - Study of transit-related issues in the Commonwealth. In conducting its study, the Department of Rail and Public Transportation (DRPT) shall study, but not be limited to, the following issues: 1. Performance. The study should determine if there should be a system in place to reward operator performance based upon specific performance criteria (e.g., farebox recovery, cost per passenger trip, passenger trips per vehicle revenue hour, etc.); 2. Prioritization - currently all capital requests are matched equally. The study should examine different funding categories; 3. Stability - match ratios change every year based upon demand and available revenues. The study should examine holding systems harmless at existing levels and creating a reserve to stabilize funding for both capital and operating expenses; and 4. Allocation - current funding formulas were established in the Code of Virginia about 25 years ago at a time when transit was not as important as today in the overall transportation network. The study should evaluate the allocation of the 14.7 percent of Transportation Trust Fund revenues among capital and operating expenses and special programs. The study should also address the current Code language that allows transit funding up to 95 percent of eligible capital and operating expenses, and should determine an appropriate percentage.
